Squad vs Squad

Squad vs Squad is a fun night of games and challenges where squads will compete to win points for their teams. At the beginning of each challenge the leaders will put up an envelope with an unknown amount of points in it. The winner of each challenge will get the envelope and the points inside. The squad with the most points at the very end win.

Each squad will get a list of the activities before hand with no details about what the activity actually is and they will decide who is going to compete in what trial. They will only find out the details of what the challenge is before the get up to compete. Some challenges may require more than one person and people can have multiple turns but allow everyone to have a turn before others have a second or third go. There are empty challenge slots if leaders want to add in their own challenges.

Challenges:

Baby Bottle Challenge: Provide the young people with a brand new clean baby bottle filled with a drink of your choice, nothing fizzy. Then they have to race to see who can drink the entirety of their bottle in order to win.

Going Crackers: The young people taking part would be given a plate of 5 or 6 dry crackers and they aim of this challenge is to eat these and the first person finished wins.

Tin Can Roulette: Have several tins bought from the shop and remove their labels, get the young person to choose a can, not knowing what is in it and they have to eat the contents of the tin. The first person to either finish their tin or eat the amount determined by the leaders wins.

This challenge could also be renamed the Baby Food challenge, and they have to eat a small jar of baby food instead.

The Blind Barber (2 people from each squad): In this challenge, one person is going to be the barber, and they will be blindfolded standing behind the second person who is sitting on a chair and will have shaving foam put on their face (put a makeshift bin bag apron on them). The person standing behind the chair, will have to use a spoon to scoop off the shaving foam until they have it all removed. The first team to successfully do this, wins.

Marshmallow Swing (2 people from each squad): Tie a marshmallow on a string, one of the participating young people will sit on their knees and one will remain standing. The one standing needs to put one end of the string in their mouth and try and successfully swing the marshmallow into their partner's mouth. No one can use their hands. The first team to successfully do this, wins.

Flour Mountain: Pour piles of flour onto paper plates, hide jelly babies inside. Each young person will have to use their mouths to pick out the jelly babies. Warn your young people NOT to breathe in when they are digging out the jelly babies but to come up for air or they'll get a mouth full of flour. Put a timer on for a minute and see who can get the most.

An alternative version to flour mountain to avoid anyone feeling sick is where you put flour into a deep round bowl with a flat bottom, turn it out onto a surface to create a flour mountain with a flat top – place a small figure on the top of it. Give each squad member a knife and they have to take it in turns to cut some flour off the mountain. If the figure falls off when someone cuts, they lose.

Nametag Challenge (The whole squad): Give every member of the squad a strip of large masking tape or masking tape and write their names on them. Place it on the back of each young person. Let them separate out and then start the challenge, the aim of the game is to try and get as many nametags from other plays as you can before losing your own. The last team standing wins.

Cereal Box Yoga: Using a cereal box, get each squad member chosen to stand round the box. Taking it turns the young people must pick up the box using their mouths and not their hands. With each rotation a bit of the box gets ripped off so it gets smaller and smaller until the last person is standing. If they fail to pick it up with their mouth or another part of their body touches the floor other than their feet, they are out.
